The Ukrainian Delegation was headed by I. Biliodid.

2. Prior to the delegation's departure from Kiev, BILODID instructed its members how they had to behave in Prague, and warned against Ukrainian bourgeois nationalists who will come from the West. In particular, he named Prof. Olexa Horbatsch and his wife as the "most nasty" of all of them. In Biliodid's "presentation" Mrs. Horbatsch turned out to be even "more clever and dangerous" than her husband. In CHOP most of the delegates were thoroughly searched.

3. VERVES and RUSANIVSKY took part in the Conference of Ukrainists at which the eventual organization of an International Association of Ukrainists was discussed. (The idea came from Presov as reported before.) Both Soviet Delegates took a very negative attitude to the project and attacked it as "unnecessary, superfluous, unclear, suspicious".

4. Most eager to please BILODID were DEY, VERVES, and RUSANIVSKY.

5. Prof CHYZHEVSKY of Heidelberg, West Germany refused to read his paper because of "the presence here of the Soviet Delegation, representing the Soviet Union, where my words and opinions are being distorted and falsified, and where various thoughts are being ascribed to me which I never expressed". This created a general consternation and in particular the West German Delegates felt rather awkward.

6. Most Soviet Delegates behaved quite differently than they had been instructed by Bilodid, though on the whole were not willing to except the literature.

7. According to the Source, Anna H. Horbatsch was told by NOVYCHENKO that her anthology of Soviet Ukrainian prose had been given to him for "final appraisal". The anthology is going to be published by the Erdmann-Publishing House in Tuebingen which is in contact w th the "Institut fuer Auslandsbeziehungen". The latter asked Soviet literary "authorities" for their opinion about the anthology.

8. The information obtained covered in general already known topics ... at Chornovil, May 22 in Kiev, "Sobor affair" etc.
RUSANIVSKY is "stated" as BILODID'S successor.

9. Sources distributed and left on the spot 27 books published by Prolog and Suchasnist, 12 books by other publishing houses, and 6 issues of Suchasnist magazine.
